By Unanimous Agreement

YESTERDAY'S UNANIMOUS rousing propaganda is therefore a major accomplishment. It remains I passage of the Arab solution for the current Middle East crisis does not mean that a general settlement of the problems confronting that troubled area has been achieved by the United Nations. But the event does have great significance.

It means that through a little give and take on both sides agree-ment has been reached on a reasonable and peaceful easing of tensions in Lebanon and Jordan. And it means—perhaps in the long run of greater importance—that the United Nations Assembly has again been the agency through which an international settlement was won.

Normal diplomacy had proved ineffective, a summit meeting had fallen through, the trans-Atlantic barrage of letters had got nowhere. But when the nations turned to their established common meeting place, the U.N. Assembly, a remedy satisfactory to all 81 members was quickly forthcoming. As in the case of the Suez controversy and other crises, the United Nations machinery filled the needs of the hour.

The Arab resolution itself does meet all the existing problems. But it contains two major clauses, each of which involves a guarantee by one side or the other.

The Arab nations have reaffirmed their undertaking to refrain from political interference with other countries by means of radio broadcasts. Britain and the United States have agreed to evacuate their troops from Jordan and Lebanon as soon as requested by those states or as soon as the United Nations has made evacuation possible through security arrangements.

A cessation of the Nasser-inspired turmoil in the Middle East is obvi-ously the chief desire of the West. Much of the revolutionary movement in Jordan and Lebanon has been the direct result of inflammatory broad-Saudi Arabia has likewise been the target of the pan-Arabic leader. To silence such rabble-

It remains to be seen whether the Arabs will observe their U.N. undertaking.

On the other hand, withdrawal of Western troops from the two small Mediterranean states has been prime requirement of the larger Arab powers. The Western promise is definite and specific. It will be up to U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold to create as quickly as possible the conditions of stability which will enable Britain and the United States to carry out the terms the resolution.

It will be noted that the Arab resolution was very similar to the terms of the Norwegian resolution introduced earlier and which Canada helped to sponsor. And this in turn resembled the general proposals of President Eisenhower a few days ago. In the face of apparently unaniagreement even Russia could not find it expedient to object.

It appears at the moment that Nations direct participation may be confined to an observer corps, rather than provision of a standby police force which many would like to see organized. However even this is a step forward in recognition of the U.N. as the acceptable and logical body to exert jurisdiction over trouble spots.

The U.N. has emerged with enhanced stature from the present situation, which means that its power to solve future problems will be thereby augmented.

Those future problems still threaten, of course. The major issue of Arab nationalism and emergence as a global force must still be faced by the West. Yesterday's settlement was a significant step in Western recognition of the facts-and a portent of further changes to come. While these may appear as concessions at the time, they will prove to be strengthening factors for the West as well as for world security -a fact which Russia no doubt is now contemplating.

The Nervous Watchdog

UNDER THE FORMER LIBeral Government the public accounts committee of Parliament seldom met and failed lamentably in its duty of studying every year the ex-penditures of the state.

Mr. Diefenbaker promised to change all this, follow the British system and make the public accounts committee the impartial, non-partisan watchdog of the treasury.

, That excellent promise Mr. Diefenbaker began faithfully to carry out when the new Parliament opened a few months ago. He offered, on the British model, to appoint a Liberal as chairman of the committee to demonstrate its non-partisan character. The Liberals agreed, though rather reluctantly, knowing that if one of them was chairman a threeto-one majority of the membership would be Conservative and would have its way. So under the chairmanship of

Mr. Alan Macnaughton, a Liberal from Montreal, the committee started to study the annual report of the auditor-general, who always has some sound criticism to offer on the Government's accounting methods.

This was a promising start. It seemed likely that in Ottawa, as in Westminster, our Parliament could forget, temporarily at least, the partisan gestures and political manoeuvres of an election campaign, get down to business and find out where savings might be made in government spending.

Unfortunately, however, partisanship has reappeared in the case of the famous printing bureau at Hull. Of course the Liberal Government's mishandling of this project required investigation to prevent its recur-rence elsewhere but the Conservative members of the committee have shown by their attitude that their main purpose is less to get the facts than to smear the Opposition.

In this enterprise they have been quite successful. But as a result, the public accounts committee is in danger of becoming a political cock-pit instead of a factual assize.

This year the committee is investigating the expenditures of the Liberal Government. Next year it must consider for the first time the expenditures of the present Conservative Government.

Then the Conservative members will be tempted to concentrate their energies on the defence of the Government while the Liberals will be tempted to use their opportunity to damage it. That sort of thing would provide fun and games for the politicians but it would not provide the public accounts committee with the non-partisan, purely factual inquiry proposed by Mr. Diefenbaker.

The Sweet Tooth

THE CANDY INDUSTRY IS DIS-1 turbed by Canada's inadequate sweet tooth. Canadians are eating only 13.6 pounds of candy per capita every year as against 17.4 pounds in the United States and 28 pounds consumed in Britain. The manufacturers of confectionery are therefore planning a national campaign to make Canada more candy-conscious.

Our national metabolism, the nice balance between sugar and other things, is a problem for the medical profession (though the dentists have their own ideas on the subject and generally take a dim view of sweets). The amateur psychologist, however, may be permitted some unscientific speculations.

Is that crusty attitude which some American statesmen are always detecting in us due to our lack of inner sweetness? Would we become collectively sweeter to foreigners if we ate a few more pounds of candy

Perhaps the truth is just the con-trary. The Canadian nature may be so naturally sweet that it does not demand the stimulus and constant refuelling needed by Britons and

OLD SPANISH CUSTOM

By B. A. TOBIN

Prompting the Inner Voice

A FEW years ago — quite a few, in fact — there was a popular song that started out: "Valencia-a-a-a, in my dreams it always seems I hear softly call to me . . ." It came out at a time when the Spanish influence was strong Tin Pan Alley and it enjoyed a good run among the sheikhs and shebas who at that time populated dance halls and rumble seats. The old tune occurred to me the other day when I read that Tobin Valencia, Spain, is once more in the hit parade, although in a different way. It seems that bill collectors in Spain lead an unhappy life. Like any human being they feel the need of recognition, of appreciation, of notice from their fellow men, but they haven't been getmen, but they haven't been get

Bill by the Horns

To put it bluntly, Spanish bill collectors have been ignored. That was not only tough on the collectors but on the creditors who employed them. The debtors appeared not only ignorant of the collectors but of the bills themselves In a land famous for bull fights, bill fights were almost non-existent — the defending matadors wouldn't turn up or even accept the challenge.

So an enterprising firm of bill collectors in Valencia has tried a new tactic. According to a news item, it dresses its agents in bright red suits, guaranteed to be visible several blocks away and readily recognizable all over the city for what they are. Man in a crimson suit—bill collector. The associa-tion of ideas has been firmly established.

Now the firm sends its sanguine collectors out to haunt reluctant debtors. don't know whether the latter get to the point where they cry: "In my dreams it always seems I hear you softly call to me . . ." But they certainly get to the point where they see red at the very mention of a debt-and hurry to pay up.

Constant Shadow

For the red-clad agents conspicuously tag along with the debtor, latching on to him early in the morning, following him to work, to lunch, to the cafe, to the promenade, to the show and so home.

Everywhere the debtor goes, his incar-nadined shadow goes with him. People notice it—how could they miss it?—and begin to vhisper behind their hands: "Ha. Jose D'Oques owes money!" hands: "Ha. Jose D'Oques owes money:
That does it. Jose can't afford to lose face that way. And he certainly can't afford to let his face be red like that all the time. He pays up.
I understand that in Valencia these days a debtor only has to glimpse a red suit six blocks down the street and heading his way before he makes for the nearest collection agency to settle up his bills.

The Valencia system opens up a whole new field of such arrangements. Quite apart from being dogged by a man in a red suit, like a fugitive from Santa Claus, think of the variations that could be used.

Imagine the methods the muni-cipalities could think up to encourage delinquent taxpayers to become — well, linguent?

Imagine being followed from morning to night by a little man softly ringing a small bell—the kind dowagers use to summon the footman to the table. little man would not need to speak, to gesture, to create a scene. Just the tiny tinkle of that bell, day in and day out, day in and day out, until the victim broke down and rushed to the offices at Royal Oak to settle his account.

Scented Reminder

Imagine the feelings of a lady, neglectful of her burgeoning debt at a large store, who was followed relent-lessly through the streets by a female agent who unceasingly sprayed carna-tion perfume in her vicinity. No demands, no altercation, no importuning—just the silent, accusatory puffing of that atom-izer wherever she went.

Even the iron nerve of a feminine credit user would crumple under such a campaign. Meekly she would hurry to the accounts office and settle upthen go home and tear the carnations out of her front garden.

Or take the case of a youngster playing hookey from school. Under the new meinod there would be no need for seizure of the truant, or loud threats of ounishment. A quietly dressed man yould appear everywhere the child went, hovering near yet never closing in on him. And the man would gently yet constantly slap his left palm with a stout strap held in his right hand.

Flap, flap, flap, minute after minute, ur after hour. The sound would hour after hour. penetrate the truant's mind until he could hear nothing else. Without a word having been spoken, by lunchtime the lad would be defeated. With a gasp of relief he would scamper for the schoolard to escape the implied fate that dogged him.

Fiendish Tactic

It will be recognized immediately that these measures, while not exactly punishment, are closely akin to it. They are perhaps nearer to brain washing—for it is the inner conscience of the fugitive himself, not the actions of the pursuer, which in each case achieves the desired

Doubtless even more refined adapta tions of the system could be developed but I haven't time to go into them now. I thought I would just slip home and check through the old beer carton in which I keep my unpaid bills.

Smoking Danger

The cigaret manufacturers are making an all out effort and spending large sums in full page announcements in the press, as in our Victoria Daily Times, in an effort to allay people's fears on the question of the disease of cancer arising from cigaret smoking.

Cancer is rapidly taking its place at the head of fatal diseases, and cigaret smoking has also been increasing treme dously at the same time, and it is not surprising that those who make these goods are out to protect their business.

Whatever they may say in their full page advertisements there is abundant vidence from careful impartial, scientific and medical research to prove that cigaret smoking does directly cause cancer of the lungs. The filters provided remove very little of the total nicotine and only serve as clever advertising pro-paganda to fool the smoker while the adly fumes continue to penetrate the throat and lungs.

The idea of smoking in moderation is also a dangerous procedure as a habit is formed and a pack or more of cigarets day is soon used regularly, and delicate membranes of the throat and lungs are impaired.

There will always be many who con tinue to follow this habit but let us be wise and sensible and appreciate a healthy body and freedom from such a slavish habit. We will arise fresh as a daisy in the morning with untainted breath, enjoy the perfume of the flowers and the taste in foods, and not be the cause of fires in couch or forest, and will have the money saved to spend on something better. FROM WASHINGTON

Voice of Warning

THE Senate put on a pretty remarkable show, the other day-a show that was at once flesh-crawling, wonderfully encouraging and deeply moving. The show began with an eerie debate on what must surely be the most eerie measure ever considered by the American Congress—an amend-ment to the Military Appropriations Bill by Sen, Richard Russell of Georgia, forbidding the defence department to spend any of its ap-propriated funds on propriated funds on plans for the surrender of the United States. The occasion of the Alsop nendment was a story published in the Louis Post Dispatch by Brig-Gen. Thomas Phillips, Gen. Phillips revealed that the Air Force subsidiary, the RAND Corp., had been peering ahead into the years when the Soviet Union is due to acquire overwhelming superiority in nuclear striking power.

Contemplation of this period, wrote

Gen. Phillips with complete accuracy, had led the RAND scientists to make a study of the circumstances in which the United States ought to surrender.

Members Roused

The Republicans, led by Sen. William F. Knowland of California, were indig-nant at the mere suggestion that the Eisenhower administration could be studying surrender, as the Russell amendment seemed to imply.

But what made the debate so eerie was the simple fact that no one, on either side of the aisle, really tried to defy the grim facts that had impelled the RAND scientists to make their grim study.

Sen. Symington of Missouri vouched for the accuracy of the facts. Sen. Sal-donstall of Massachusetts, the Senate's leading hoper-against-hope, replied that no doubt the Soviets might have got ahead of us in some important ways, but we were still ahead in others. That was the most that anyone attempted in the way of optimism.

Then, much later in the crowded day, Saltonstall's young Massachusetts col-league, Jack Kennedy, rose to make one of the most remarkable speeches on July 18, says Marcel Hutin in The Echo de Aug. 22, 1938: For the second time since the Pelagic Sealing Treaty was brought into force, a judge of American defence and national strategy that this country has heard since the end of the last war,

It was a speech about those same facts that drove the RAND scientists to the Exchequer Court will sit in the Courtmake their hideous calculations. It was a speech that everyone ought to read and house here on Sept. 12 to hear a claim for ponder. Its theme was simple, .
"We must realize," said Kennedy bleak the return of seal skins confiscated ly, "that the nuclear deterrent ratio dur-ing 1960-64 will in all likelihood be under terms of the weighted very heavily against us."

By JOSEPH ALSOP

Kennedy dealt in facts-much more detailed and hard facts than Senators like Symington and Jackson of Washington have been able to deal in, because they are impeded by their access to classified information, and Kennedy is not thus impeded. He showed the gradual weakening of the American nuclear deterrent, the rapid gain in Soviet nuclear striking power during the so-called years of the "gap." He described the "missile lag" in the period when present American defence policies will concede an immense superiority in missile-power to the enemy.

Soviets Aware

"The Soviets," he remarked with bitterness, "will be as aware of their advantage during the years of the gap as we are . . And nuclear destruction is not the only way in which the Soviets will be able to use their advantage . . Their missile power will be the shields from behind which they will slowly but surely advance—through 'Sputnik diplomacy,' imited both by wars, indirect aggression, intimidation and subversion . . . and the vicious blackmail of our allies . . The balance of power will gradually shift against us. Each Soviet move will weaken the West, but none will seem to justify our initiating the nuclear war that might destroy us.

But enough has been said already to suggest why this strange day in the Senate was flesh-crawling. What made it encouraging was hearing the hard facts being laid on the line at last, in this era of officially propagated complacency.

Dangerous Years

What made it even more encouraging was hearing Kennedy's calm but bold call for a vastly greater American effort to overcome the danger of the years of the "gap." And what made the day downright stirring was hearing this young Senator, himself no stranger to war or danger, confidently forecasting that there was no future danger which an aroused and mobilized American ople would not and could not overcome. Kennedy borrowed his closing words from Churchill: "Come then, let us to the fask, to the battle and the toileach to our part, each to our station-le us go forward together in all parts of the land. There is not a week, nor a day, nor an hour to be lost."

This was the language, charged with remembered glory, of the greatest Englishman of the century. But the voice—the voice—that passed facts, that rejected every complacency, that called for efforts worthy of the United States and its role-was the authentic voice of

NEW YORK-Are Britain's intentions in Jordan honorable? This is probably the most important question being discussed behind the scenes, where the real work is being done, at the United Nations, Jordan is the hinge around which any settlement in the Middle East must swing and thus Britain's aims and intentions are basic to any solu-

What does Britain want? Why did she go into Jordan? Under what circumstances will she pull out?

Many Afro-Asians at the UN are con vinced that Britain put her troops into Jor-dan in order to establish a long-term power position. In fact, it even goes further than that-Britain also vitally affected by what the Sheik of Kuwait does with his huge persnoal profits. At the moment these go to London for reinvestment and it's reported that they constitute some 10 per cent of the total new capital which Britain has available each year. Britain already has insufficient capi-tal and it's said that, if deprived of this 10 per cent, she might find it impossible to continue as banker for the sterling bloc.

To put it simply, Britain's position as a world power depends on Middle East oil and it's said that Britain is determined to maintain this position and thus it's said she's prepared to adopt desperate measures. So goes an argument which is widely circulated around the United Nations.

As a matter of fact, Canada has been re ported gravely concerned and it's said that this concern is the reason why Canada did not speak last week before the General Assembly, Canadians deny this hotly and insist that the reason Canada didn't speak was because the situation was felt to be fluid and that there wasn't anything useful which Canada could say. Furthermroe, Canadians insist that they're sure Britain genuinely wants to get out of Jordan

Most people agree, in fact, that Britain probably does feel that she can't remain indefinitely in Jordan and that she genuinely wants to get out, as she has said on several occasions. This doesn't answer the question, however, "under what circumstances will

Highly informed people at the UN say that Britain feels a genuine concern for King Hussein. Britain created the little kingdom after the First World War and is said to feel an obligation toward it. Furthermore, some Britons here are saying that King Hus sein's position is not as bad as is generally supposed and that, given an opportunity, he can rally his people behind him.

The Secretary General, however, is said to have written off the King as a certain loss and his plan is understood to neutralize Jordan. King Hussein would thus have the choice between staying on and risking his kingdom and his life or resigning, probably on favorable personal terms.

In so doing, he would prevent his king-dom falling to President Nasser and in fact, it would no doubt be argued that this is possibly the only way he can prevent it from going to Nesser.

remains to be seen whether Britain or King Hussein will accept this reasoning but there is no doubt that it's supported by the vast majority at the United Nations.

New Look in Motor Bikes

LONDON-As I remarked not long ago, when it comes to design the motorcycle has lagged far behind autos and airplanes and most other contrivances for getting from one place to another.

A motor bike of these postwar days is not greatly different to look at than one of prewar times and is as uncomfortable, as dirty and as open to the nents for the rider. In fact, so little change has there been in motor bike design that the annual show here in London (similar to the Motor Show, Boat Show, etc.) has been scrubbed as a yearly func-tion because there has always been so little new to display.

But now, all of a sudden, the motor bike has undergone a revolution.

"I've seen one of the new jobs and what contrast in design to what long-suffering motorcyclists have been putting up with for

Ariel of Birmingham are the makers of it and appropriately enough they call it the Leader, because other manufacturers have little option but to follow suit.

The engine is totally enclosed. There's a metal shield as protection for the legs against wind and mud, and a perspex windscreen on the handlebars. It has a car-type instrument panel, with a speedometer, ammeter, light switches and a dashboard clock. And it can be locked, with the front wheel in any position. Parking lights, winking di-plugs into the dashboard-it's loaded with gadgets. It even has whitewall tires.

If you're interested in the technicalities of motor bikes, they tell me it has a 250 cc two-stroke engine, with a top speed of 70

m.p.h. and 85 miles to the gallon.

Reason for this sudden revolution in motor bike design, of course, is the tremendous popularity in this country of Continental scooters. Clean, comfortable and smart looking, they've hit the British motorcycle industry hard-so the only answer was to hit back. And the Ariel company have done it by producing what they feel has all the advantages of the scooter plus the added punch of a motorcycle.

Interesting question raised in view of the Empire Games at Cardiff: Why is it that in athletics all prewar records have been bettered—except one? Getting the mile below four minutes we know all about, but look at all the other record improvements.

Compared with 1938, they've lopped 1 minute 24 seconds off the six miles, 2.7 seconds off the 440 hurdles, almost a minute off the 880 yards swimming and added over 6 feet to the shot putt, 31/4 inches to the high jump and 28 feet to the javelin.

Only one of the major prewar records still stands—the 26 feet 8½ inches long jump of Jesse Owens in 1935. Why? No one knows

But we may know more when the reports are in from the six medical research teams that are hard at it at Cardiff examining this whole matter of record breaking and when the human limit is likely to be reached.

Death Rays Discovered

IT'S 'KEEPERS' ON $20,000 AFTER 6 YEARS

VANCOUVER (CP)-Some $20,000 found by a Canadian Pacific Railway bell boy aboard, the Princess Marguerite last year is being held by the company.

A company spokesman said today they would hold the money for six years.

He said the bell boy who found the money and handed it to his superior would be rewarded "in accordance with company policy towards employees who find valuables."

The spokesman would not discuss what will happen to the rest of the cash. But legal opinion is that the money be-longs to the CPR. Lawyers said it was found by a com-pany employee on company property and if the rightful owners were not found the money belongs to them.

The Story of YOUR NEWSPAPER

PART III-Mechanical Production

ON ANY tour of a newspaper plant, the chief interest of visitors centres around two fea-s. People stand fascinated in front of the Linotype machines, watching these almost human contraptions turn written news items into lines of metal type; and they get an almost hypnotic effect from seeing the folded newspapers roll off the great roaring presses and speed on their way

These two operations, along with the mysterles of the stereotype room, are the backbone of the mechanical department of any daily paper. Without them it would be impossible to provide each edition in the thousands of copies that are necessary to keep the community informed.

As "folios" of typewritten copy reach the composing room from the editor's desk in the newsroom, they are marked with directions to the printers and given to a Linotype or Intertype operator. The operator sits in front of the keyboard of his machine - and veterans prefer an old kitchen chair whose legs have been cut down to give a low and comfortable slant.

Casting a Plate for the Press Letter keys are depressed like those on a typewriter, and as each lever goes down it sets in motion a complicated process that ends with small brass "matrices"—each one containing the mould for a letter of the alphabet-being collected nto a row the same width as a newspaper column.

the words and punctuation marks which constitute one line of print in the newspaper, and each letter and word has been automatically spaced out so that the line is filled evenly to the correct width. Each matrix is then automatically carried back to its proper container, ready for further use. The slugs — too hot to touch right away with the bare hand—drop from the machine onto Molten lead is forced against the row of matrices and a "slug" is produced. This metal slug contains a little tray at the rate of up to six a minute. About 160 of these lines make a full column in your newspaper. It all seems simple when it's done by experts.

But there is a large investment of ability and money in the operation. *

A BOUT 140 men are engaged in the mechanical departments of Victoria's papers. A new departments of Victoria's papers. A new Linotype or Intertype machine, fully equipped, costs $28,000, and an average-sized composing room may have 20 of them. Fifty tons of typemetal seethe in the electric melting pots of the Victoria Press plant. It isn't just plain lead. There is tin in the mixture to give fluidity, and antimony to give hardness to the slug of type.

Having finished setting his copy, the operator takes his galley or tray of type to the "dump" where galley proofs are pulled. These strips of paper, with an inked impression of the type, go to the proofreaders and editorial desks. The type itself is taken to a "chase" or metal frame in which each page of the paper is assembled. Along with other galleys of type, advertisements and picture "cuts," the news item is placed in the page by a compositor. He works from a "dummy," which is a sheet of paper drawn up to show the position of each picture or block of type in the

When completed, the page may be inked and a page proof run off for further checking. Then the type, on a flat, wheeled table, called a turtle, is taken to the moulding machine. Here a cardboard sheet known as a mat is placed over the page of type and the whole thing is passed under a steel roller at 3,000 pounds

The lead type-faces, column rules and other material in the page are pressed into the mat, each leaving its imprint. Hot lead could be poured on this sheet as it lies flat, and you would get a perfect reproduction of the original page of type. But modern high-speed presses print from rollers rather than from flat surfaces. The wood-pulp mat is therefore bent into a semi-circular curve, placed in a casting box, and the molten lead is then poured against it from a huge electrically-heated pot which holds five tons. The result is a curved lead plate which still contains all the marks of the original flat page.

The plate, along with others for each page, is locked onto the rollers of the press. When they are inked and the flowing sheet of newsprint is pressed against them, the printed pages of today's paper speed from the press.

THE PRESS itself does a miraculous job. Faster than the eye can follow, it prints the pages, gathers them, cuts them off, folds them, counts them, and ejects them onto an endless belt that carries them to the mailing room. Each twentyfifth paper is thrown into the stream slightly askew so that individual papers do not have to be counted in making up delivery bundles.

At top speed, your press can print 40,000 papers an hour, of 40 pages each and using up to four colors. It is a Goss five-unit machine weighing 135 tons, and it consumes 450 pounds of ink a day—which in a year would fill more than half the Crystal Garden pool.

More than 4,000 tons of newsprint-valued at well over $500,000 - hummed through Victoria's press last year to bring you the news. In a strip the width of one page, a single day's run of paper would stretch nearly 400 miles.

A modern newspaper plant is a striking example of how experience, craftsmanship, scientific ingenuity and capital can be successfully blended to deliver a needed product. But these would be sterile indeed if to them were not added imagination, and the abiding efforts of men and women dedicated to doing a good job.

(This is the third in a series of articles published by Victoria Press Ltd. to describe the operation of a modern newspaper.)

Anglers Tangling With Bigger Coho Third in Row for Pete

By IAN SMITH

The big run of the year may not yet be in, but coho are starting to provide some pretty fair action for lower Vancouver Island salt-water anglers.

Becher Bay has been hot for the last few days, and Juan de Fuca Auto Court re-ports that the big northern coho have started to come in from the Otter Point area.

The silvers have been getting larger-up to 15 pounds and predictions are that the main run should be in some time next week. But there is a chance that the coho could start hitting at a faster rate weekend in the Sooke Pedder Bay Marina also reports fair coho fishing, with most boats bringing in at least one fish. But the big least one fish. But the big run, it is felt, is still to come.

BIG SPRINGS

Gundar Hillicke and hiswife proved Monday evening that the big springs are still around as they came in at Pedder Bay with a 39-pound, 11-ounce lunker and a 27%, pounder. Doug Robertson also found the bigger ones, landing a 27-pounder.

Most coho are being taken on Minnow Teasers and the larger Strip Teaser.

Closer to home, while the occasional fair catch has been reported off Macauley Point or Brotchie Ledge, action 's still pretty slow as yet.

But Oak Bay Boathouse states that "very few boats are being skunked." Springs have slacked off, but the boathouse reports that the silvers are filling their place nicely. INLET CATCHES FAIR

The coho fever has also touched Cowichan Bay, but for for the most part has proven to be a false alarm.

Sid Harknett landed a 32pound, two-ounce salmon Wednesday morning that fitted the usual description of a coho, and he began to sion a new world sports fishrecord.

But the biologists said no. however, despite the fact that the fish bore no spots on its tail, which some consider a sure sign of a silver.

Ron Gamie brought in a 37-pound, one-ounce spring Thursday morning, and Wade Gunn had a 28-pound, threeounce beauty. Jack Young also hit the jackpot, with a 23-pound, four-ouncer, and a 14-pound, four-ouncer at Cowichan where plugs are provthe most consistent lures.

Farther north, Al Wilson eports that Qualicum Bay has plenty of springs in addition to lots of cohe around five pounds. They're grab-bing Minnow Teasers and small strip.

Al McLean reports that the tyee fishing has begun in earnest, and already registra-tions at the Tyee Club are more than 50 per cent of last year's recording.

Average weight of the kings is 35 pounds, and he forecasts that September fish-"will equal, if not exceed that of several years past."

Thursday for probation report and sentence.

Court was told the mower, property of Russell Choat, 3060 Devon, was stolen Aug. 10 and was bought from Ullock, using the name of Bill Thompson, by Victor Neill, 1535 Oakcrest, on Neill said he paid $10 cash and rote a cheque for $65 payable to Thompson

Police said Ullock tried to sell the mower at several service stations in the Douglas-Burnside area before Neill bought it. Others he approached were suspicious, court was told.

Ullock admitted selling the nower but claimed he did it for a friend and did not know it was stolen, although the friend told him he would find the mower in bushes across Johnson Street Bridge.

The accused was stopped Aug 13 on Hillside by Oak Bay officer Sgt. Victor Pratley. He had the cheque in his possession then.

MONTE ROBERTS

Relman Morin, one of the far-flung correspondents who rander the globe on behalf of the news-gathering facilities of Associated Press, has come out with what he terms a "Are we all becoming alike?" he asks.

"Is every nation on earth losing its special customs, culture, individuality?"

Mr. Morin fears that soon all the peoples of the world will be dressing alike, eating the same foods, living in a few standard types of houses, watching the same international TV programs, dancing the same dances, reading the same books, developing the same tastes.

I can understand Mr. Morin's worry. If all the peoples in all parts of the world were alike, there would be no need for the Associated Press to send correspondents wandering

The correspondents could stay home, and whatever th reported as happening at home would be the same as what is happening in the rest of the world.

The only hope for correspondents would be the im development of space travel, so they could find new worlds to wander.

The alikeness forecast by Mr. Morin would also have an adverse effect on the tourist industry.

Alfready many Canadians have given up visiting the United States because the United States is so much like Canada. Or should I say, so many United States citizens have given up visiting Canada because Canada is so much like the United States?

And to carry this to its logical conclusion what would be the use of visiting darkest Africa if darkest Africa were exactly like darkest Sooke?

If Mr. Morin's forecast is correct, now is the time to act. The nations of the world should pass a law making it compulsory for each nation to retain certain specific traits. trouble is, it might turn out that each nation in the world would pass a law exactly like that passed by each of the other nations.

I tell you, it is indeed a chilling thought Perhaps there'll come a day when you can't tell the people

Gil Turner Fights Stefan Redl in New York at 7 on Channels 6, 2, 4

By PHIL LEE, Times TV Editor

THE TWO WORLDS-It seemed, somehow, Tuesday night, that the two worlds represented by Shirley Temple's fairytale, "The Magic Fishbone," and CBUT's bitter documentary, "Skid Row," stood for what man hopes for and what man becomes.

There is so much difference between hope and actuality. One wonders often where in the life of a man does he straggle off on to the wrong trail, the one that leads to bitter disappointment, disillusionment and, eventually, despair. What caused the wrong turning? Why, when he discovered that he had made the error, didn't he retrace his steps? Or was Shakespeare's hypothesis so incorrect? "The fault, dear Brutus, lies not in our stars but in our-

"Skid Row," of course, is only a name "He wants to make sure he for the corral for lost doesn't miss the fights!" souls. Although it is thought of as being located only in big cities, the interviews pretty well proved that its inmates can be found everywhere, in the homes of poverty, in the homes of the rich, in circles of government, in law, medicine, the arts or wherever men exist.

"SKID ROW" IS A STATE OF MIND even more than a state of the body. It is the total sum between anticipation and realization. A man with a lunch bucket who is happy in his work, his life with his family, counts himself a success. On the other hand the man who has the repeat, "Apples on the Lilac Tree," wherein hubby made millions at something in which he is unhappy or by resorting to principles which in his heart he knows are wrong is doomed to bitterness which even his associates or the unaware public can't dispel. Just someone telling you what a success you are doesn't necessarily make it so.

Therefore it seemed to me that the pathetic derelicts Pueblo Kid." in the "Skid Row" documentary propounded much more than themselves, life's cast-off playthings. Rather they were a mirror, each and all representing certain failures in each of us to make the most out of our lives, big or small, rich or poor.

Certainly they branded us with a cross of some kind to bear...just by the fact that they are there.

Middle East Hinge

(The following column dealing with the situation in Jordan was written before the present debate in the United Nations General Assembly on the Middle

NEW YORK-Are Britain's intentions in Jordan honorable?

This is probably the most important question being discussed behind the scenes, where the real work is where the real work is being done, at the United Nations. Jordan is the hinge around which any settlement in the Middle East must swing and thus Britain's aims and intentions are basic to any solu-

What does Britain want? Why did she go into Jordan? Under what circumstances will she pull out?

Many Afro-Asians at the UN are con-vinced that Britain put her troops into Jordan in order to establish a long-term power position. They say that Britain is trying to regain the position she lost when Britain's "Glubb Pasha" was fired as the Commanding Officer of the crack Jordanian army and also to regain, in part, what she lost when she evacuated her troops from the Suez Canal

Burke

It's said that Britain wants these troops permanently based on the Arabian Peninsula so that they will be in a position to move quickly to save Britain's controlling position in the vital oil sheikdoms of the Per-

It's said that Britain's position as a major power depends on oil, not simply maintaining the supply of oil, but also oil profits. In fact, it even goes further than that—Britain is also vitally affected by what the Sheik of Kuwait does with his huge persnoal profits.

At the moment these go to London for reinvestment and it's reported that they constitute some 10 per cent of the total new capital which Britain has available each year. Britain already has insufficient capi-tal and it's said that, if deprived of this 10 per cent, she might find it impossible to continue as banker for the sterling bloc.

To put it simply, Britain's position as a world power depends on Middle East oil and it's said that Britain is determined to maintain this position and thus it's said she's prepared to adopt desperate measures. So goes an argument which is widely circulated around the United Nations. As a matter of fact, Canada has been reported gravely concerned and it's said that this concern is the reason why Canada did not speak last week before the General Assembly, Canadians deny this hotly and insist that the reason Canada didn't speak was because the situation was felt to be was because the situation was left to be fluid and that there wasn't anything useful which Canada could say. Furthermroe, Canadians insist that they're sure Britain genuinely wants to get out of Jordan.

Most people agree, in fact, that Britain probably does feel that she can't remain indefinitely in Jordan and that she genuinely wants to get out, as she has said on several occasions. This doesn't answer the question, "under what circumstances will however,

she get out?"
Highly informed people at the UN say that Britain feels a genuine concern for King Hussein. Britain created the little kingdom after the First World War and is said to feel an obligation toward it. Furthermore, some Britons here are saying that King Hussein's position is not as bad as is generally supposed and that, given an opportunity, he can rally his people behind him.

The Secretary General, however, is said to have written off the King as a certain loss and his plan is understood to neutralize Jordan. King Hussein would thus have the choice between staying on and risking his kingdom and his life or resigning, probably on favorable personal terms.

in so doing, he would prevent his kingdom falling to President Nasser and in fact, it would no doubt be argued that this is possibly the only way he can prevent it from going to Nasser.

remains to be seen whether Britain or King Hussein will accept this reasoning but there is no doubt that it's supported by the vast majority at the United Nations.

New Look in Motor Bikes

LONDON-As I remarked not long ago, when it comes to design the motorcycle has lagged far behind autos and airplanes and other contrivances for getting from one place to another.

A motor bike of these postwar days is not greatly different to look at than one of prewar times and is as uncomfortable, as dirty and as open to the elements for the rider. In fact, so little change has there been in motor bike design that the annual show here in London (similar to the Motor Show, Boat Show, etc.) has been scrubbed as a yearly funcbecause there has Reyburn always been so little new to display. But now, all of a sudden, the motor bike has undergone a revolution. "I've seen one of the new jobs and what a contrast in design to what long-suffering motorcyclists have been putting up with for generations.

Ariel of Birmingham are the makers of it and appropriately enough they call it the Leader, because other manufacturers have little option but to follow suit.

The engine is totally enclosed. There's a metal shield as protection for the legs against wind and mud, and a perspex wind-screen on the handlebars. It has a car-type instrument panel, with a speedometer, ammeter, light switches and a dashboard clock. And it can be locked, with the front wheel in any position. Parking lights, winking di-plugs into the dashboard-it's loaded with gadgets. It even has whitewall tires.

If you're interested in the technicalities of motor bikes, they tell me it has a 250 cc two-stroke engine, with a top speed of 70 m.p.h. and 85 miles to the gallon.

Reason for this sufiden revolution in motor bike design, of course, is the tremendous popularity in this country of Continental scooters. Clean, comfortable and smart looking, they've hit the British motorcycle industry hard-so the only answer was to hit back

And the Ariel company have done it by producing what they feel has all the advantages of the scooter plus the added punch of a motorcycle.

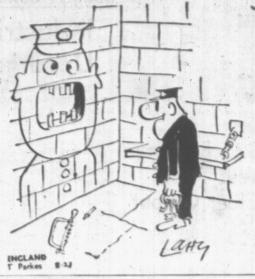

Interesting question raised in view of the Empire Games at Cardiff: Why is it that in athletics all prewar records have been bettered-except one? Getting the mile below four minutes we know all about, but look at all the other record improvements.

Compared with 1938, they've lopped 1 minute 24 seconds off the six miles, 2.7 seconds off the 440 hurdles, almost a minute off the 880 yards swimming and added over 6 feet to the shot putt, 3¼ inches to the high jump and 28 feet to the javelin.

Only one of the major prewar records still stands—the 26 feet 8% inches long jump of Jesse Owens in 1935. Why? No one knows. But we may know more when the reports are in from the six medical research teams that are hard at it at Cardiff examining this whole matter of record breaking and when the human limit is likely to be reached.

Relman Morin, one of the far-flung correspondents who wander the globe on behalf of the news-gathering facilities of Associated Press, has come out with what he terms a

"Are we all becoming alike," he asks "Is every nation on earth losing its special customs, culture, individuality?"

Mr. Morin fears that soon all the peoples of the world will be dressing alike, eating the same foods, living in a few standard types of houses, watching the same international TV programs, dancing the same dances, reading the same books, developing the same tastes.

I can understand Mr. Morin's worry. If all the peoples in all parts of the world were alike, there would be no need for the Associated Press to send correspondents wandering around the world. The correspondents could stay home, and whatever they reported as happening at home would be the same as what is happening in the rest of the world.

The only hope for correspondents would be the immediate development of space travel, so they could find worlds to wander. The alikeness forecast by Mr. Morin would also have an adverse effect on the tourist industry.

Alfready many Canadians have given up visiting the United States because the United States is so much like Canada. Or should I say, so many United States citizens have given up visiting Canada because Canada is so much like the United States' And to earry this to its logical conclusion what would be the use of visiting darkest Africa if darkest Africa were exactly like darkest Sooke?

If Mr. Morin's forecast is correct, now is the time to act. The nations of the world should pass a law making it compulsory for each nation to retain certain specific traits.

The only trouble is, it might turn out that each nation in the world would pass a law exactly like that passed by each of the other nations. I tell you, it is indeed a chilling thought. Perhaps there'll come a day when you can't tell the people
